Model Answer #1

Response:

The maps illustrate the changes to a park between 1980 and the present.

Overall, the park has been modernized with the addition of new facilities, including a playground, a barbecue area, and bushes, while some features, like the pond and benches, have been retained.

To begin with, in 1980, the park included a pond in the center, surrounded by benches, which allowed visitors to relax and enjoy the view. There was also a flower bed in the southeast corner, while a group of trees occupied the northeastern part of the park. The park was enclosed by a gate, and there were no paths or recreational facilities at the time.

At present, several changes have been made to improve the park's functionality. The flower bed has been replaced with bushes, and a playground has been added in the southeastern part of the park. Furthermore, a barbecue area with chairs and desks has been introduced in the northeastern section, replacing the original trees. The pond and benches, however, remain unchanged, providing continuity with the park's original layout.

New pathways have also been introduced, enhancing accessibility and connecting the different areas of the park. These changes have transformed the park into a more versatile and family-friendly space, catering to both relaxation and recreational needs.

Response:

The diagrams illustrate the transformations that a park has undergone from 1980 to the present day.

Overall, the evolution of the park reflects a significant shift towards recreational use, characterized by the introduction of various facilities and alterations in its landscape.

In 1980, the park featured two access points: one located on the western side and the other on the southern side. The landscape was dominated by a cluster of trees in the upper right corner, directly opposite a flower bed. Upon entering through the western gate, visitors were greeted by a pond equipped with three benches, offering a serene spot for individuals to observe local wildlife. Additionally, a smaller flower bed was situated in the lower-left section of the park, contributing to the overall floral diversity.

In the current configuration, the park has enhanced accessibility, now accessible from all sides, reflecting a more inclusive design. The area occupied by trees has diminished due to the incorporation of leisure facilities, including chairs, desks, and a barbecue area. The playground has been established in the former location of the flower bed, while the removal of the smaller flower bed has facilitated the installation of bushes, altering the park's botanical composition. Notably, a bench has also been added near the pond, increasing its capacity to accommodate visitors and fostering a more sociable environment.
